Our highly flexible program allows you to concentrate on the musical field that means the most to you. Whether it's music technology, conducting, education or a combination of them all, UCM has got you covered.

Our commitment to fostering the growth of educators is at the center of our summer master's degree program, which allows full-time teachers to complete their degree over the course of three summers, with little or no coursework during the standard academic year. Any courses during the spring or fall are offered in a hybrid format that allows you to participate in a traditional classroom or enroll online.

By obtaining your master's degree at UCM, you're becoming part of a long history of excellence and working to shape the future of music at the same time. With our state-of-the-art facilities, innovative courses and world-class faculty, you will take your skills to the next level—and you'll be able to bring that knowledge right back into your own classroom.
